

School for the Path Less Traveled

Newsletter: March 2017

Dear companions on the path,

During the last years giving workshops, speeches and presentations abroad, I had started to include bits and pieces of the architecture of our soul and the “environment” that soul comes from. I did not plan to do this; it rather happened by itself—often-times quite by surprise...

As participants told me—if I were to offer a workshop about “that soul stuff” in English in my hometown—they would come, I started to collect the cards and bits of papers with e-mail addresses on it that people trusted to my hands. (I’m not always “at home” in the digital age; I’ve been dragged—kicking and screaming—into it.)

At that time, I had no idea if, or when, this might happen, but I was intrigued by the idea to offer a workshop to people from other countries who were interested in the way I weave constellation work and soul-matters together.

Change is inevitable;
struggle is an option.

—Conny Rios, “Ka Hana Pono”

When it comes to the theme of soul and why, on earth, we are experiencing all this tricky, difficult, hurting, boring living stuff (of course, not to mention all the beautiful, exciting, hot, deeply-moving, and meaningful situations that are equally part of our life), my investigative mind always gets a jolt of energy. I truly love a challenge (just look at whom I married), and when it presents itself in the shape of a formidable stumbling block, I feel my senses awake and my creative abilities heightened.

It often takes quite a bit of time to ready myself for a new challenge, but then I have by now finally mastered the art to wait for the signs that show me: it is time! And here we go!

And this is what I have planned for this early summer: A group with the title:

“Through the Eyes of the Soul”
2.–5. June

in Freiburg—a gem of an old medieval city, and my hometown—where I was born and raised.

Information regarding this workshop can be found here:

For my American friends (and those who like to travel)

2017 North American Systemic Constellation Conference in Virginia Beach

<http://www.nasconstellations.org/>

The last conference held in San Diego in 2015 was such a beautiful, warm-hearted and energizing happening, that I truly want to recommend it with all my heart!

The unique opportunity to dive into the heart of a constellation community of possible friends and lovers of the work is simply precious. All my many years of being part of similar conferences in Germany have shaped and strengthened my understanding of the work and my love for the community. So, check in with your heart, and with your calendar. And check the many possibilities to borrow money, if needed; it is absolutely worth it! You are investing in the most important business there is: your own growth and unfolding!

Another new adventure

The Michael Teachings: Exploring Our Deepest Spiritual Questions
with Shepherd Hoodwin
15.–17. September

This coming autumn we are organizing two workshops with one of the most experienced teachers of the Michael teachings:

<http://www.michaelteachings.com>

His name is Shepherd Hoodwin.

<https://www.shepherdhoodwin.com>

For now, the workshops are primarily for students of mine, but a few places are being held for other interested people.

During these workshops, there will be an in depth introduction to the Michael teachings, and Shepherd will be doing a channeling on two evenings—one with personal questions, and another about the group energy and consciousness as a whole. I will also lead constellations—with the material presented, whenever it fits the group and the work.

Information about Shepherd's workshop can be found here:

A personal note

This is my very first newsletter in English. More will follow whenever enough material has accumulated in my thoughts that I find interesting enough for sharing, or new ideas for workshops in English have taken shape—be it my own or the ones from invited guests, I will share it with you!
